Invited Research Seminar

Flight Lines: Reading Black Geographies

Thursday, Oct. 9 | 12:30-1:30 p.m.
Mercy Hall, Crystal Room

SPEAKER:

Elleza Kelley, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor of English &
Black Studies, Yale University*

Dr. Kelley's interdisciplinary work is at the intersection of African American Studies, American Literature, Black Geographies, and Environmental Humanities. She will discuss her academic journey, approach to scholarly research, and current book project, Flight Lines: A Poetics of Black Space, which traces the relationship between black geographies and black aesthetics in African American literature and visual art.

This event is supported in part by the Maximilian E. and Marion O. Hoffman Foundation Fund for the Humanities at the University of Saint Joseph.
